

Date: 23 April 2019 - EMBARGOED UNTIL APRIL 30

From: Progressive PR and Publicity on behalf of Australian Book Review
(03) 9696 6417 | darren@progressivepr.com.au

Daniel Halliday on tax justice

Why do politicians find tax justice so hard? Is tax fairness for all a Utopian goal? And if tax rules continue to benefit older Australians at the expense of younger ones, is there another way forwards for fiscal fairness? In the lead-up to the 2019 federal election Daniel Halliday looks at why tax policy can never start from scratch and at the difficulty of trying to institute reforms that benefit everyone.

Daniel Halliday's article on tax justice appears in our May issue.

The article is available online from 30 April.

Daniel Halliday, who teaches at the University of Melbourne, works mainly on topics at the intersection of political philosophy and economics, with a special focus on markets, taxation, and inequality. He is the author of The Inheritance of Wealth: Justice, equality, and the right to bequeath (Oxford University Press, 2018).

Daniel Halliday is available for interview.

Further information

More information about Australian Book Review can be found on the ABR website.

Please direct interview requests to Darren Saffin at Progressive PR and Communications on (03) 9696 6417 or darren@progressivepr.com.au